SECO-LARM ANNOUNCES NEW BLACK/WHITE AND COLOR DOME CAMERAS FOR DISCRETE VIDEO SECURITY

Small, easy-to-install cameras offer sharp video images under a wide range of lighting conditions

IRVINE, CALIF., Sept. 17, 2002 - SECO-LARM U.S.A, Inc. today unveiled black/white and color dome cameras, the latest in its fast-expanding range of CCTV cameras and related products.

The miniature dome cameras, with a diameter of only 3.5 inches and a smoked glass appearance, were designed for security applications which require an attractive yet inconspicuous look.

The EV-1223B12 camera features a Sharp 1/3-inch CCD element for 400 TV lines at a resolution of 512 x 492 pixels for EIA-standard video systems. A similar model, the EV-1253B12, based on CCIR standards, has a resolution of 500 x 582 pixels. Both include an F3.6mm lens, and work with low lux illumination.

For color cameras, the EV-1224C12, with its Panasonic 1/4-inch CCD element, offers 330 TV lines at a resolution of 510 x 492 pixels for NTSC video systems. The EV-1264C12, aimed at PAL-standard systems, is similar, but has a 500 x 582 pixel resolution. For both models, the included F3.6mm lens works with low lux illumination.

All the new cameras have a 75-ohm composite video output, a gamma correction of 0.45, and shutter speed of up to 1/100,000 of a second. They operate on 12VDC, and have a current consumption of only 1.6W (black/white) or 1.5W (color). Total weight, regardless of model, is 4.2 oz.

The dome cameras are available immediately.
