SECO-LARM'S New Double-door Electromagnetic Lock Includes LED Status Monitor and Status Sensor Relay Output

IRVINE, CALIF., May 27, 2003 - SECO-LARM U.S.A, Inc. just introduced the ENFORCER E-941DA-1K2P electromagnetic lock for double doors.

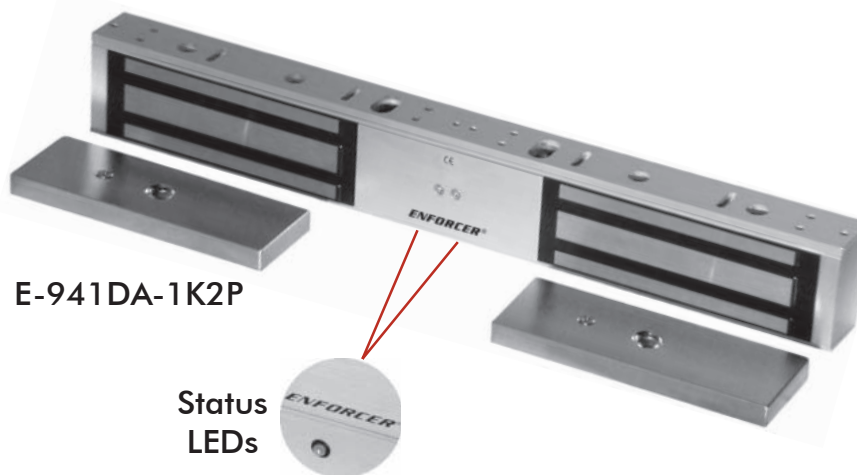

The E-941DA-1K2P protects double doors, with 1,200 pounds (545kg) of holding force per door.

The lock features a maintenance-free design with a rugged, anodized-aluminum housing. Programmable to work at either 12 or 24VDC, the current draw is only 500mA at 12VDC or 250mA at 24VDC per door.

Incorporated into the E-941DA-1K2P is a 2-color LED which indicates whether the magnetic lock is locked or unlocked (green: locked, red: unlocked). Also incorporated into the E-941DA-1K2P is a status sensor relay output (rated 3A @ 12VDC), which monitors whether the protected door is opened or closed. The E-941DA-1K2P also features no residual magnetism, a detachable faceplate, an adjustable mounting bracket for easy installation, and MOV surge protection.

Complete mounting hardware is included, plus optional "L" and "Z" brackets which allow mounting on nearly any type of double door are available for easy mounting as needed.

The E-941DA-1K2P is SECO-LARM's latest addition to its line of indoor electromagnetic locks, which include the E-941SA-1200 (1200lb. holding force), E-941SA-600 (600lb. holding force), E-941SA-300 (300lb. holding force) single-door electromagnetic locks.
