SECO-LARM Introduces a New Line of Outdoor No-Touch Request-to-Exit Sensors

IRVINE, CALIF., July 21, 2011. SECO-LARM now has available for immediate shipment a new line of Outdoor No-Touch Request-to-Exit Sensors.

There are six new sensors available: slimline or single-gang plates, with English or Spanish printing. Both the slimline and single-gang versions are also available with a manual override button that functions without electricity in case of power failure. Models with a manual override button are available with English printing.

The sensors are weather-resistant for outdoor use with an IP rating of IP65, and the clean and simple "no touch" operation allows the user to open the door with just a wave of a hand, reducing the risk of cross-contamination. The sensing range can be adjusted up to 7" (18cm). The trigger duration can be adjusted between 0.5~20 seconds, and the plate's LED can either turn from red to green or green to red when activated.
